Grossmont-Sharp affiliation proceeds; new board named

With its 4-1 vote in favor of affiliation, the board of directors of the Grossmont Hospital District on Tuesday night cleared the way for the final legal steps leading to its association with Sharp HealthCare in the new not-for-profit Grossmont Hospital Corporation.

As part of that process, Sharp HealthCare has announced a proposed slate of directors for the new corporation. In addition to the current five elected members of the present district board and two physicians still to be named, the proposed Grossmont Hospital Corporation Board will include the following eight members: La Mesa residents Mogens (Mo) Bildsoe, Art Butler, Stephen J. Horrell, Leroy Knutson, Robert Pastore and Eleanor Tobin; Jamul resident Toni Daley, and Chief Executive Officer of Grossmont Hospital, Michael Erne.

In an exclusive interview with the Review last week, Sharp HealthCare President Peter Ellsworth praised the new slate of directors as highly representative of the community, and reflecting a "fine tradition of community involvement."

In stressing the advantages of the affiliation, Ellsworth pointed to a list of issues including greater access to new technology, a strong information network, a large base upon which to spread the costs of trauma care and research, as well as the growing costs of charity care.

"The difference between a winner and a loser in hospital care is the ability to get a larger base, and then, do a better job," added Ellsworth.

Questioned as to some of the negative feelings which surfaced on the affiliation issue, Grossmont Hospital CEO Michael Erne expressed the belief that they represented the feelings of a vocal minority only.

"I'm confident that the large body of the medical staff will retain their loyalty to the hospital," he stated.

Ellsworth stressed the fact that Sharp was not an out-of-town for-profit hospital, but a concerned San Diego non-profit operation.

Both Ellsworth and Erne agreed that many local citizens simply do not understand the issues and that when the facts are explained, they will better understand the advantages of the move. Both men expressed the belief that those government agencies and HMOs that pay for medical services are becoming more and more reliant on managed care systems, and that hospitals must develop strength in this direction to be competitive in the future.

Both also expected that there would be some legal challenge forthcoming from several of the organized opposition groups.

Newton to speak at League of Women Voters workshop

A Drip Irrigation Workshop will be sponsored by the League of Women voters at their next "round table."

Guest speaker Betty Newton, a long-time League member, will conduct the workshop. Newton teaches adult education classes in landscape gardening and is a staff columnist for the San Diego Union.

The workshop is open to the public. The luncheon meeting is on Tuesday, June 4 at noon at the East County Regional Center (in the cafeteria meeting room), 250 E. Main, El Cajon. (Lunch may be purchased in the cafeteria.)

Pipeline repairs will cause temporary water concerns

Repair work on a San Diego County Water Authority pipeline scheduled for June 3 has got local water agencies which will be effected by the shutdown of the pipeline scrambling to implement alternative water sources.

Four areas of corrosion have been found in sections of the Authority's pipeline No 4. Originally installed in 1974, the pipeline is the sole source of potable water for 375,000 people in the East and South County, including Lemon Grove, which is in the Helix Water District.

"It is essential that everyone conserve during this time; we don't anticipate any water shortages, but the water available to the customers will be about half of our normal supply," stated Charlie Cassens of the Otay Water District. Agencies which will be effected by the five to seven-day repair are Helix, Padre Dam, Lakeside, Otay and Riverview.

The pipeline corrosion was discovered during an inspection of an eight-mile section of Pipeline 4 where it crosses Miramar Naval Air Station, in the wake of last September's break in that line.

Country Hills holds coronation ceremony

Country Hills Residential Retirement Center in Lemon Grove held its First Annual Coronation last Friday night, choosing a "king" and a "queen" from its many residents.

Following entertainment which included the "Kopy Kats" playing "swinging" standards and the "Parasol Strutters" parading through the crowd in their 1920s costumes, the program began.

The six finalists were introduced, and the winners were announced and crowned, with the "queen" receiving an armful of flowers.

The winners were Winnie Cox and Robert McGrath: first runners-up were Lois DeYoung and James Zepfel, and second runners-up were Toni Ainsworth and Harold Adams.

Queen Winnie was born in Alpine, Texas. She has lived in almost every state, and worked as a nurse for twelve years. She has four sons, and lived in Poway for four years with one of her sons before coming to Country Hills. Her sister, Maryan Brundidge, moved from Florida to become her roommate. Winnie loves gardening, church activities and people, and has a great smile. Following the coronation, she danced with one of the "Parasol Strutters," remarking that she had waited six years to be on the dance floor again.

King Robert was born in Greenwich, Connecticut and played professional baseball for five years as a pitcher. He also served in the Merchant Marines for 15 years. He came to California ten years ago, entering Country Hills four years ago as a wheelchair patient. He made such remarkable progress, which he attributes to his therapist, that he has graduated to using a walker. On receiving his crown, he thanked all the residents and staff for their support, and for making him feel so welcome since his arrival there. McGrath is currently serving as the resident council president, and loves sports (especially baseball) and reading.

Lockwood attacked in front of bakery

Just prior to opening time last Wednesday morning, a local senior citizen was pistol-whipped in front of the Lemon Grove Pastry Shop.

Seventy-year-old Donald C. Lockwood refused to give his money to two young assailants and received multiple head wounds inflicted by the infuriated duo. He was accosted as he sat in his car, and apparently told them in no uncertain terms where they could go with their demands. After administering a severe beating, the two would-be robbers lept into an allegedly stolen car and sped off.

The episode was witnessed by Mrs. Rita Berkel and Mrs. Karen Ross, employees of the bakery who called for medical help.

Lockwood was taken to Grossmont Hospital, and early reports are that he will recover from the messy but superficial wounds, and will be back at his old seat in the bakery once again.

The two attackers apparently were on a mugging spree after stealing the car in Spring Valley, and allegedly assaulting at least one other person before coming to Lemon Grove.

Sheriff's deputies were immediately pressed into hot pursuit, and it appears that evidence left on the scene will be very helpful in identifying the culprits.

Regular customers of the bakery were shocked to hear about this occurrence. According to Councilman Bob Burns, a regular customer of the bakery, this "points up the seriousness of our crime situation in today's society, when such a thing can happen just half-a-block from our police station." He also noted that everyone in the bakery "couldn't believe such cruel treatment of such a gentle and warm-hearted soul as Lockwood."

Shortly after 11 a.m., eight more robberies and a chase, police arrested and are holding two suspects.

Mt. Miguel El Trovador News Briefs

Mount Miguel senior, Al Gast, was chosen as Editor-in-Chief for the 1991-92 yearbook staff. Assistant editors Jenny Allen and Heidi Badger were also chosen. The head photographer will be Melanie Seyer with assistant photographers Moses Galvan, Abe Gaters and Hennie Lewis. The new yearbook page editors will be as follows: Michelle Espanola, Monica Gomez, Peter Hernandez, Ki Jones, Nina Kukoski, Trisha Lake, Linda Lasota, Duyen Nguyen, Laura Lizzo, Victor Louque, Rachel Moore, Rachel Olson, Jim Rodgers, Wendy Rodgers, Hilda Rodriguez, Katherine Sea, Anthony Shipp and Eric Toboga.

The Mount Miguel 1991 swim banquet will be held Thursday, June 4 at the Skyline Wesleyan Church hall, 1345 Skyline Drive, Lemon Grove, at 6 p.m. Tickets are $6.

Mount Miguel drama team opened its exciting comedy, "This Must Be The Place" on Tuesday, and will continue through Friday, with curtain time at 7 p.m. Tickets may be purchased at the door for $3 to see such Matador veteran performers as Scott Kennerly, Eddie Pettis and Yvonne Aguirre.

Mr. Larry Ferguson and Mr. Bob Windrem, took their GATE (Gifted and Talented Education) eleventh and twelfth-grade English classes on a field trip to visit the La Jolla Museum of Contemporary Art. They also visited the UCSD campus for lunch and attended the La Jolla Playhouse performance of "Three Sisters."

Mount Miguel's librarian, Mrs. Mimi Curtin, will be retiring this year after 14 years at the school, first as a special education teacher and then as the librarian for the last eight years.

Mathematics teacher, Mr. Carl Thompson, is retiring after 33 years of teaching. He has been at Mount Miguel for the last eight years and previously was involved in the District's music departments, most visibly as the head of the string division, coordinating with five different schools.

The annual Mount Miguel High School Student Art Show held its opening reception yesterday on the patio of the art building. The display will be open for viewing through today, and classes have been invited to "book in" for viewing.

The Matador Marching Band and Specialty Corps participated in the Arco presentation yesterday. They close their season with the 3rd Annual Pops concert tonight at 7 p.m. at the Mission Valley Church of the Nazarene, 4750 Mission Gorge Place. A donation of $3 is suggested.

Second honors went to C/PFC Laqwonna Good, and the best drilled third-year cadet was c/MSG Michael McCallister, and c/SFC Anthony Shipp commanded the best drilled platoon. All will be presented with medals at the annual ROTC Awards night in the gym at 7:30 p.m. May 31.

As winners of second place in the Grossmont Union High School District Clean Campus Competition, Mount Miguel is holding a schoolwide barbecue during lunch tomorrow. Students will be released by class in order of class competition points to facilitate feeding everyone.

Dr. Stephen Krashen, linguistics professor at the University of Southern California, presented a witty and informational lecture on "Reading Across the Curriculum: Reaching the Lower Level Student." His conclusion was that reading, at all levels, improves literacy. He rec-

Obituary

Rita K. McDade

Rita K. McDade of Lemon Grove died May 19 at her residence. Funeral mass was held on May 23 at St. John of the Cross Catholic Church.

Although born in Nebraska, she had lived in the area for 38 years and had retired in 1989 from Grossmont Hospital as an administrator. She had worked at Grossmont for 32 years in a variety of capacities including as a delivery-room nurse, a nursing supervisor and as patient relations administrator. Before working at Grossmont, she had worked as a nurse at Mercy Hospital after graduating from the Mercy Hospital nurses program.

In addition to her nursing degree, she received her master's degree in behavioral science from National University. She was a member of St. John of the Cross Catholic Church and the Soroptimist International of Lemon Grove for which she was Immediate Past President.

Her hobbies included ballroom dancing and playing the piano.

Surviving McDade are her son and daughter-in-law, Mark and Diana McDade of Lemon Grove, and grandson Lorne McDade of Lemon Grove. The family suggests memorials be sent to the Grossmont Hospital Hospice, P.O. Box 158, La Mesa, CA 91942 or Soroptimist International of Lemon Grove, P.O. Box 518, Lemon Grove, CA 91945. Conrad Lemon Grove Mortuary was in charge of services.

Military Widows to meet

The Inland San Diego County Chapter of the Society of Military Widows will meet June 8 at Wells Center, 1153 E. Madison, El Cajon.

Sue Chamberlin, a staff member of the Hillcrest Recieving Home, will give an overall review of the many aspects in the operation of that home. The meeting will begin at 10:15 a.m. and a no-host luncheon will follow. For more information, call 443-8804 or 468-2140.

Orphan birds need 'mothers'

Project Wildlife is in dire need of new volunteers for the care and feeding of San Diego County's baby songbirds. There will be two options for volunteers: caring for the birds in their own homes, or volunteering four hours per week at the Project Wildlife care facility in San Diego. Volunteers will be needed until August.

"The baby season is in full swing here; we desperately need caring people to help with the thousands of injured, orphaned and displaced wildlife," said Lyn Lacye, spokesperson for Project Wildlife. Nearly 6,000 animals and birds are brought to the Project yearly for care.

Volunteers are also needed to answer phones for five hours each week or work as transporters in the County.

Anyone who can help in any capacity should call 225-WILD or 282-0257.

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

Honoring those who served

May 18 was Armed Forces Day, and it was celebrated in grand style in San Diego. A crowd that has been conservatively estimated at 250,000 enthusiastic Americans lined the downtown parade route to show support for our military. Veterans of past wars, plus many active duty personnel passed proudly in review for our populace to show their appreciation for jobs "well done," past and present.

The veterans of the Vietnam conflict who were so shamefully treated after that war, were especially pointed out for the honors they so richly deserved. The parade included scores of units of every description from the Pearl Harbor survivors and the "Chosen Few" (Chosen Reservoir, Korea) to our modern-day SEALS and even a mini-submarine on a flatbed truck. True to our San Diego colors, they were all wildly and emotionally applauded by a standing-room-only crowd along every foot of the route. Flags, banners, yellow ribbons and waving arms were everywhere. The old timers in some vestige of a uniform from bygone days, saluted resolutely with few dry eyes. The most heartening to see were the children, waving, chanting "USA" and serving up the most adorable versions of salutes to daddies or friends. The wives, sweethearts and mothers said more with their expressions of love and concern than anyone ever could, or would try to say, for our troops. It was San Diego's finest hour and one long overdue.

While it is sometimes fashionable or selfishly advantageous for some to criticize and malign our service people, it is never right. Those who now serve are the first line of protection for our families and our way of life. They also personify the many who never returned from conflicts at all. When we look upon a young person in uniform today, we are actually seeing the face of others who remain forever on a Normandy beach, on a hill in Korea, a tangled jungle on Guadalcanal, a volcanic ash mountain on Iwo Jima, or in a foxhole at Bastogne. Tulagi Bay is called Iron Bottom Bay because of the ships that lie there with much of their crews still aboard. The Arizona still has over 1,000 men on a perennial "watch" below her decks. These must be remembered and be celebrated in everlasting appreciation for their sacrifice on our behalf.

It was my extreme pleasure to see the parade from the front seat of a WWII jeep driven by Ex-Marine Sgt. Jack Shelver (circa, Korea) and along with Vietnam Navy vet Dave Allen. Lt. j.g. David Shelver of the present Desert Storm era was supposed to be with us, but he "had the duty" and did it. I wore by blue Navy flattop of 1943 vintage, and was honored to represent "my" war as well. We were enthusiastically received in the spirit of all the others that we endeavored to represent, and so, to show that Lemon Grove cared enough to participate in the event.

About halfway through the parade route, a smallish lady of some years wearing a blue dress, broke out of the crowd that lined the street. From a distance, or maybe it was my aging eyesight, but I swear that she looked for an instant like my mother. My mother has been gone for almost ten years now, but it took me back to her greeting when I returned home in 1946. With both arms outstretched, she came straight toward me, as if to tell me something. Jack stopped the jeep and I leaned out to meet her. With tears in her eyes, she gave me the sweetest motherly kiss that anyone could ask for, and turned away, back to the crowd. I guess I took the place of another son that day, and I am sure it made two mothers happy. I don't know who she is, but she made me very happy as well.

I cannot think of any prouder accomplishment that a person can have than to serve his or her country. To wear a uniform and to do what is required of one for a couple of years, is a privilege and an honor that no one can ever take away. I feel truly sorry for anyone who could not, or did not, experience the satisfaction of serving our country.

Being part of the solution

A recent column of mine prompted two Lemon Grovans to write to me on the same day. They both dealt with the same subject which was the gist of the column in question. The "country crossroads" attitude and the "trashy" conditions in our town are what ticked these two readers off.

The old saying, "one man's meat is another man's poison," applies to many facets of life. There are many who had origins in small towns in various parts of this great country, and deplore the loss of such amenities in today's high density and modernistic way of life.

I happen to be one who settled in Lemon Grove because it was perceived to be a "small town" and thereby a friendly community of good people as remembered from my youth. Becoming acquainted with many of the residents and being able to call most everyone by their first name was a given in those days. I thoroughly enjoy being greeted in kind as I walk the streets of Lemon Grove. It is gratifying to be recognized in the pastry shop or the hardware store.

Surely, there are opposite opinions, and residents of our city who are here in the hope or expectation that Lemon Grove will one day be a "big city" modern and classy, in the manner of a La Jolla or Hollywood. They certainly have as much right to be here, and to strive for their desires as I do mine.

The complaints are not new, and are as frustrating to we City Council people who are expected to correct them, as they are to anyone.

The litter on the streets, the weeds and junk accumulations, and the abuse of our animal-keeping laws are probably more painful to Council members because we are constantly being accosted and accused of being the cause by not being the cure. A strong anti-litter campaign is needed, and where possible, citations should be given and enforced. Junk piles, especially where the health of the public is endangered, should be eliminated. Numbers of animals are written into our laws, and these laws should be obeyed.

In defense of the seeming ineffectual efforts of the City Council and staff, there are some hard facts that must be faced. First, the civil rights movement has caused the enforcement of laws to lean heavily in favor of the perpetrator rather than the victim. Without wanting to undo all of the good that has transpired, the movement has had a negative effect on the respect for laws and the obeyance of same. Thus, "proving" who dropped the used diaper in the gutter or how much of a hazard that pile of car parts is creating, or even how injurious that honking goose is to the ears, are not simple judgements easily made. Where clear health dangers exist, the complaint can be quickly processed. Where rats are obviously plentiful, measures can be taken. Where junked cars are placed in violation of our ordinances, a citation can be issued for their removal. All of these things are being done by our Code Enforcement officer in response to complaints. Mr. Bonner does not slink around neighborhoods trying to "find" transgressors of our laws. He has a full work week just responding to formal complaints.

Here is where we might put the shoe on the other foot, so to speak. Both letter-writers wished to remain anonymous. The fact is, that unless there is a complaint filed, nothing can be done about specific violations unless our officers were to accidentally "fall into" these situations. Our police officers are having the same problems with drug dealers, etc., that go unreported. The old saying, "stand up and be counted" applies here.

If you have a compliant, then write it down and submit it to City Hall. It may be that the owners of those ducks and geese are unaware that they are offending anyone, or that they are breaking the law.

There are laws against littering, so if you see someone emptying an ash tray in the street, report them. If not confronted, they will just continue to do so.

Growing up on a farm, I used to awaken to a rooster crowing. At my present stage of life, I must admit I prefer to hear Ernie Meyers on KSDO.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

Those of you who have read this column with any frequency are well aware of this writer's jaundiced view of the human animal. As a voracious reader of newspapers, one cannot be anything but continually dismayed by man's inhumanity to his fellow man, his environment and himself. We endlessly blow each other to bits, allow millions to starve and treat our children, all too often, as if they are something less than human.

While all this is going on, we are, out of greed, ignorance or short-sightedness, destroying the very earth that houses us. A daily diet of all of this cannot help but make one wonder if there is any earthly salvation in our future.

And then comes Gertruda Moldrzyk and suddenly, things don't look so bad. Moldrzyk, now 78, is being honored in Los Angeles by the Jewish Foundation for Christian Rescues for her bravery and compassion during World War II.

In the winter of 1945, Edwin and Gertruda Moldrzyk found two weak and starving young women hiding in their barn. Sisters Sima and Malka Dafner had escaped a Nazi death march from Auschwitz and hidden there. Knowing that to harbor

A good and decent human being

Jews was punishable by death, the Moldrzyks, nevertheless, took them in. Giving them non-Jewish names and telling neighbors (and later, Nazi soldiers who forcibly housed with them) that the girls were relatives who had fled from Russia, Edwin and Gertruda Moldrzyk kept the sisters safe until liberation by the Russians. Despite the constant danger of discovery by either the Germans or collaborator-neighbors, they kept their two Jewish "daughters" safe, simply because it was, as Gertruda says, "what any decent human being would have done."

At the height of the Holocaust, there were many decent human beings who did what the Moldrzyks did, but there were infinitely more who either betrayed their fellow human beings or simply turned their backs while knowing what was transpiring. Thus, the opportunity to honor one of these "decent" human beings is rare and pleasurable. Despite the generous and compassionate Gertruda, the world remains a pretty dismal place and we go on killing and starving each other. But, as long as people like her exist, we do at least retain the hope of earthly redemption. Long may she live and prosper, for without her and her kind, we would all be lost.

From Where I Sit

by Frank Andrews

"When can you and your wife come over for a couple days?" was the serious request my brother-in-law, Howard, had just made by way of a long-distance phone call.

We were the last of my wife's Oklahoma tribe to move to beautiful Colorado to be amongst all the other "Okies." Our choice of a place to settle was on the western slope, Mancos, while Howard and Willie's sister, Mary, chose to live on the eastern slope in a small town called South Fork. They had purchased a run-down lodge and motel nestled in a hunting and fishing paradise.

Howard and Mary had left their beloved family of two beautiful daughters, especially their grandchildren, to move from Oklahoma to the mountains. From time to time, Mary would get pretty down and would need a couple uppers - just Willie and me. It always worked. As soon as this foursome was together a short time all were crying with laughter. So, once again, the team of Frank and Willie was called out to administer their "mirth therapy."

Getting there was another problem - Wolf Creek Pass. After a call to the highway department on that crisp, snowy day, we decided to have snow tires installed on our four-wheel drive Jeep Cherokee.

At that time, the pass was full of switch-back curves without any guardrails to protect from the long drop down. The drifted snow was so deep that blower-type snow plows had to be used, leaving a sheer wall on the mountainside higher than our house. Now, that was a scary ride.

After such a stressful crossing, Willie and I could use some "laugh therapy" as well as my in-laws. With a hot cup of coffee and a few silly jokes, we were all feeling no pain. Howard was deep into the remodeling of the lodge, so we laid plans for the following day's work.

Howard's current project was the spraying of the new kitchen cabinets he had just built and installed. So, we sanded, dusted and closed-off the kitchen with drop cloths to insure a super dust-free spray job. Thank God, in a short while the wives came in to check up on us "spray boys." Howard and I were just about gone from the strong fumes of the lacquer sealer being sprayed in such closed quarters.

Howard had nearly passed out and I was well on the way. Howard remarked later, "That was the cheapest drunk I have ever been on." It was a horrible experience, but did give us lots of good material for many, many sick jokes.

As soon as our sides healed up from so much belly laughing and lacquer sniffing, Willie Marie and I headed back West, "over the hill," with our "laugh therapy" finished until another time.

Especially for Teens

A happy marriage begins when you're single

Going to get married? Almost everyone does, sooner or later. But sometimes, that special someone doesn't come along right on schedule.

Cause for panic? Nope. Smart singles use that extra time to their advantage, according to an article in the June issue of "The New Era," a teen publication of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The following tips will help you to make good use of your time before you marry. They will also help you to be a better spouse and parent when wedding bells do ring.

1. Learn how to handle money. No matter what credit card companies tell you, you can't have everything you want exactly when you want it. Learn how to budget and save. Don't expect others to bail you out financially.

2. Get as much education as you can. Going to school is easier when you're single and a good education can make the difference between a comfortable life and a constant financial struggle.

3. Prepare yourself for a job you like. Ideally, a job should make use of your personal talents and let you feel you are making a contribution. Too many people involve themselves in boring jobs because they think things will change when they get married. It's better to train for work you can enjoy.

4. Master basic living skills. Learn to take care of yourself by developing the ability to cook, clean, grocery shop, do basic car maintenance or home repairs. These skills will make you more independent now and will prove invaluable when you have a home of your own.

5. Be your best self now. Don't say to yourself, "When I get married, I'll pay more attention to my neighbors" or, "When I have a spouse, I'll go to church more often." Marriage doesn't magically change people. The best time for personal growth and development is right now.

6. Develop good friendships. Friends can be a great source of fun and support in your life. Choose friends wisely. Associate with people who bring out the best in you. Long-standing friendships are one of the joys of life.

7. Choose to be happy now. Don't waste your time waiting for ideal circumstances to make you happy. Take responsibility for your own life. Set worthwhile goals you can accomplish through your own efforts. The successes you work for will bring a great sense of satisfaction and fulfillment.

Finally, remember that life is a process. You don't need to have and be everything all at once. Enjoy the good things in your life right now, and look forward to a rewarding and productive future.

Backdraft

I'm starting to get a little depressed. All these years, I thought Hollywood was supposed to be the "dream factory," but now, I'm not so sure.

Recent Hollywood fare has done nothing but cruelly smash my childhood fantasies into tiny pieces. First, a series of violent underworld dramas stole away my aspirations towards gangsterism. Now, Ron Howard's "Backdraft" has polluted the one fantasy native to all little boys - I no longer want to be a fireman. Sure, riding in a shiny fire truck with a funny red hat would be great. But somehow, the part about fire isn't all that appealing anymore. I couldn't go through a workday without worrying about getting my eyebrows burned off.

Anyhow, "Backdraft" is the story of two fire-fighting brothers carrying on the tradition of their father, who was killed in the line of duty. Stephen McCaffrey (Kurt Russell, "Tequila Sunrise") is a daredevil, sometimes taking unnecessary risks in order to save lives. His brother, Brian (William Baldwin, "Flatliners") is more of a misfit, becoming a fireman only after years of failed business ventures. Together, they become involved in the investigation of an arsonist who specializes in back-drafts, a dangerous phenomenon occurring when flames consume all the oxygen in a room, leaving only natural gases. In such conditions, the introduction of any oxygen triggers a huge explosion.

The male leads both give strong performances, but it is Russell who shows impressive dramatic ability. In scenes between Stephen and his estranged wife (Rebecca De Mornay, "Risky Business"), Russell proves he has emotional range that has, until now, gone undeveloped on screen. A talented and diverse supporting cast includes Robert De Niro ("Goodfellas") as fire investigator Donald Rimale, Scott Glenn ("The Silence of the Lambs") as fireman Adcox, Jennifer Jason Leigh ("Miami Blues") as a political aide romantically involved with Brian, Jason Gedrick ("Iron Eagle") as a rookie firefighter, and Donald Sutherland as a convicted arsonist who may have clues to solving the current investigation.

The film was written by former fireman Greg Widen, and under the direction of Howard, special effects technicians have created some amazing firefighting scenes.

The thrills of these scenes make the movie; for in-between fires, the plot slows way down, and the dialogue gets a bit mushy. The idea of Donald Sutherland's arsonist character giving vital information to the investigation is surprisingly similar to the plot of "The Silence of the Lambs," but Sutherland is one of my favorite actors, so I can overlook that.

What's truly amazing are the reported inconsistencies with real-life firefighting. I've heard from expert sources that mistakes range from how protective clothing was worn to the ability of firemen to withstand heat and explosions.

I'm no expert, but even I saw William Baldwin slip his fire boots over a pair of jeans on his way to a blaze. It's very curious such mistakes were made. The film was made with the cooperation and supervision of the Chicago Fire Department, and Russell, Baldwin, Glenn and Gedrick each spent three weeks training with the CFD. And then, they put in several all-night shifts with engine companies, sometimes going out on two or three calls a night.

So, I guess the deal is, unless you're a skeptical fireman, you should enjoy the film. The dramatic bits between blazes get tedious, but the fires more than make up for it.

Miss National City wins

The 1991 Fairest of the Fair/Miss San Diego County was chosen last Friday night at the Del Mar Fairgrounds.

Danielle Bennett, Miss National City, won the 1991 title, and was crowned by outgoing "Fairest of the Fair" Jervava Marino, Miss La Mesa 1990. While not the titleist, Dancia Yacuzzo, Miss Lemon Grove, represented the city well, and gained valuable experience.

First runner-up was Dianne Emlet, Miss Pacific Beach, and second runner-up was La Vonna Fisher, Miss Mid-City. Keisha Thorpe, Miss Southeast San Diego, a 20-year-old Cuyamaca College student was third runner-up as well as Most Congenial.

Among the ten finalists was Miss La Mesa, Marsi Mitrovich, one of 33 girls who had secured titles from community pageants to be able to compete in the Fairest of the Fair.

Thursday night was the sportswear competition, and on Friday night the evening gown competition was held.

The pageant winner receives many prizes, including a $1500 check from the Del Mar Fair, and a $3,000 scholarship from the Fair's Don Diego Memorial Scholarship Fund. She will also be provided entry fees to the Miss California USA pageant, for which she automatically qualifies as "Fairest of the Fair."

Some of the 'Fairest'

Miss La Mesa Marsi Mitrovich made it to the final round at the Fairest of the Fair last Friday night, but Miss Lemon Grove Dancia Yacuzzo is still our favorite. Congratulations Dancia!

Helix Happenings

by Kristina Ruiz-Healy

It will soon be the closing of another year at Helix High School. Highlanders continue preparing for graduation, prom, finals and thinking ahead for a fun summer.

On Friday, May 17, Helix held an assembly - the "Spirit Olympics!" Seniors wore red, juniors wore blue, sophomores donned green and freshmen wore white. Each class participated in a series of fun and messy events.

The senior vs. staff softball game was held on Wednesday, May 29, and was a lot of fun!

Senior Breakfast: Senior Breakfast tickets are on sale for $8. The event will be held at Cafe Del Rey Morro in Balboa Park.

All-Star 'A' Team: "Scottie hats off" to this week's Helix High All-Star 'A' team: Melanie Thomas, academics; Rosa Mey, attendance; Jill Dawsey, attitude; Keith Harrison, athletics and Stephen Halsey, artistry.

Yearbook: The 1991 Tartan is here. The cost is

Prom: "One Moment In Time" is here. Bids are on sale for $30 each. Songs for the prom may be requested when the bid is purchased. Prom will be June 8.

Students of the Week: Congratulations to this week's students of the week: Mike Beard, ninth grade, Veronica Melvin, tenth grade; Todd Konold, eleventh grade, and Tim Sullivan, twelfth grade.

Graduation ceremony: This year, Helix plans to have more student involvement in the graduation ceremony. There will be tryouts on June 5 and 6 in the choral room during lunch. Tryouts are for an inspirational song and the National Anthem. This invitation goes out to all seniors.

Grad Nite: Grad Nite tickets are on sale for $30 until May 31. After this date, they will cost $35.

Spring Football tryouts: All ninth, tenth and eleventh graders can tryout for Spring football. Tryouts began May 28.

County fires another volley at owner of Fantasyland; Lemon Grove store not part of this legal action

by Lindy Magner

Last Friday, counsel for the County of San Diego filed suit against the owner of Fantasyland Books, after months of attempting to develop a case which would inflict penalties if owners continue operating the store in violation of zoning ordinances.

Since the store on Sweetwater Road opened last August, the County has been trying to shutdown the store for being too close to a residential area. County zoning ordinances state that adult entertainment cannot be within 500 feet of a residential area: Fantasyland is situated 168 feet from a residential zone.

This is the County's second attempt to successfully bring suit against bookstore owner Stephen D. Wiener (who also owns the Video Exchange in Lemon Grove); the County lost a court decision last November when the judge ruled the County zoning ordinance too vague to be used for criminal prosecution. In January, the County had completed writing its "urgency ordinance" which amended its original zoning ordinance, according to Dianne Jacob, chief of staff for 2nd District County Supervisor George Bailey.

The second attempt to bring suit against Wiener using the amended ordinance had been "held up" since February (when he was served with notice to cease operation), so that an additional action could be included in the case, said Jacob.

The County ideally wanted to bring suit under the state Unfair Business and Professional Code which inflicts daily penalties of up to $6,500 for a business which is unlawfully operating. However, according to Jacob, only the District Attorney can file this type of action, unless he "cross deputizes" County Counsel to do so.

"The D.A. would not give County Counsel permission to file this action; we think the state law should be changed so that it would allow County Counsel to bring this type of suit," said Jacob. At a recent meeting of the East County Coalition for Public Safety (a group which originally began as community members opposed to the bookstore) Jacob asked those in attendance to call the Deputy District Attorney and request that he agree to "cross-deputize" County Counsel.

"The reasons this additional action was important was because of the penalties; the monetary penalties would have been another method of persuasion in order to get the store out of there," Jacob explained.

The case, which was filed May 24, contains two causes of action: the first cause is for violation of the San Diego County zoning ordinance, and the second cause of action is for being a "public nuisance."

"We think we have a strong case," said Jacob.

The hearing on a preliminary injunction against Fantasyland will occur the week of June 24.

If the County "prevails" in this hearing, the store will be shut down until a trial is held on a permanent injunction, according to Lloyd M. Harmon Jr., County Counsel. If the County does not prevail, the store can remain open until the trial, which must then be held within one year.
